DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This 20th century two and one half story frame house is built in a style that is fairly common on Oakley Street and in other parts of Cambridge. The basic features of this style are a hip roof that rises to a ridge, large dormers, and a one story porch across the front with a pediment in front of the door. On this house, the porch which is supported by Doric columns and has a ballustrade between, has been fully enclosed on the south side. The front facade is three bays long. On the south, is a large gable over a polygonal bay window. There is a side entrance under the gable with a flat roofed portico in front of it. A rear wing has been added to the house. The original siding has been covered with "ersatz" siding, probably made of asphalt.
